Fennell, Wilson Claim Overwhelming Victories

The Humboldt County Board of Supervisors will welcome a new face in January and bring back a familiar one after an election that left little drama and was over almost as quickly as it began.

In the 2nd District, which includes much of Southern Humboldt, incumbent Estelle Fennell jumped out to an early election night lead and never looked back, finishing with a whopping 77 percent of the vote to challenger Glen "Bud" Rogers' 22 percent. Over in the 3rd District — which encompasses Arcata, Blue Lake, Kneeland and Manila — Harbor Commissioner Mike Wilson easily beat out Uri Driscoll to take the seat being vacated by Mark Lovelace, who has served on the board since 2008 but opted not to seek re-election. Like Fennell, Wilson jumped out to a fast lead and never faltered, finishing with 82 percent of the vote.

The 2nd District race proved a study in contrasts, with the eccentric Rogers talking chemtrails and pushing Humboldt to create a public bank, while Fennell touted her experience and accomplishments in four years on the board. Reached on election night, Fennell said she's grateful to everyone in the community who took the time to cast a ballot and that she sees her decisive win as a referendum on her four years in office.

"I see this basically as a vote of confidence," she said. "I feel very good about the work that I'm doing and, I've said all along, it's about teamwork."

And Team Supes will now include Wilson, who's served on the Humboldt Bay Harbor, Recreation and Conservation District board for 10 years. On the campaign trail, Wilson touted his work protecting the bay, noting the district's high-profile cleanup of the Samoa pulp mill site, and pledged a vibrant economic and environmental future for the county. That message, and strong support from the 3rd District's left-leaning politicos, proved more than enough to beat out Driscoll.

Wilson said he isn't concerned about stepping into a seat that has been on the short end of a lot of 4-1 votes in recent years. "I've been working with a diverse board with representatives from different parts of the county for the last 10 years," he said. "I am going to hope and believe that we'll focus on collaboration and proactive solutions."

Meanwhile, Humboldt also cast ballots for its congressional representative Tuesday. Incumbent North Coast Congressman Jared Huffman dominated the vote districtwide, taking 69 percent, and is headed for a November runoff against Humboldt Republican Dale Mensing, who garnered 16 percent of the vote.

Fortuna Man Drowns: Timothy Hatten drowned June 5 in the Eel River, reportedly after he dove into the water to save two children being swept downriver. The children survived. Hatten is Humboldt's first confirmed drowning of 2016, though a Hoopa man has been missing since being swept away in the Trinity River in April. POSTED 06.06.16

Arcata Police to Carry Naloxone: The Arcata Police Department announced June 3 that its officers will be the first in the county to carry a life-saving medication that counteracts opiate overdoses. The officers have been trained to administer the Naloxone, better known as Narcan. Humboldt County has some of the highest overdose and hospitalization rates in the state. POSTED 06.03.16

Reward Those Like Jimmy

Editor:

The feature on Jimmy Smith (June 2) made it clear what a loss this community has suffered with his passing. The wide variety of personal reflections citing his deep commitment to respect for all serves as an inspiration to each one of us, whether we were lucky enough to know him or not. His legacy lives on.

I hope that the Board of Supervisors will consider keeping his legacy alive by establishing an award that recognizes public servants who do their work just as he did, with a spirit of collaboration, co-operation and consideration. We were all better off because he lived, and it doesn't have to end because he died.

End Punitive Jail Releases

Editor:

Regarding late-night jail releases ("Eric's Law," May 26), I said in 2014 that Downey's policies were "punitive" as they represented the penalizing, rather than the cautionary and restorative, intentions of incarceration. I was chastised by people who saw my comments as over-heated and unfair. I feel I did not speak out forcefully enough.

Downey's reference to "constitutional rights" of arrestees was obscurantism of the highest order. What of the constitutional rights within the community he's charged to protect? And what of the constitutional rights of the arrested person he's obliged to "protect?" Putting an arrestee on the streets with virtually no options is akin to saying, "Go ahead, we dare you."

When someone is arrested for some offense, why would anyone ensure the possibility of repetition by such a thoughtless action as exposure to such extreme circumstances? This is not only punitive, it suggests culpability as it ignores the imbalance of conditions that derail people's behavior in the first place. Sheriff departments in other jurisdictions have implemented more humane policies.

I was circumspect in 2014. I will not be in 2016. Downey's unwillingness to adjust a bad policy indicates he is unfit for the job.

Peace

Editor:

After reading the "In Rememberance" column in the May 26 NCJ, all I can say is let's work for peace and end war. It's time to stop the millions of heartbreaking stories like these and all the reverberations in families and communities they cause. Something like 60 percent of our national budget goes to the Pentagon. That insanity needs to change. We need an "alternatives to war" or Peace Department now.

A Simple Box

Really quite easy;
Four and a half inches by Six and a half
By Eight and a half.

Could hide $50,000 in hundreds,
Jewelry, deeds, promises never honored and buried in the backyard.
Archeologists would signify its history.

A box to hold a cremated man
From 250 pounds to one hundred pounds.
Because fat burns off and what's left are just ashes, like marshmallows in summer.

Hopes, desires, needs, wants
And dreams of what could have been,
All ashes.

A simple box made of virgin redwood,
Milled from a ranch once hunted.
To last 300 hundred years in wet soil,
before blending with the earth.
As if the soul needed pondering before release.

Longer than people will remember,
Than people will care.

Corrugated cardboard more spiritually
Kinder and expedient.
But lacking craftsmanship of human purpose.

The same exploitive purpose of seas,
Of air and the water we drink.

A simple box that holds
Nothing than dotting the period of a life
That strived to be authentic.

Liability and Losses

How Humboldt County's insurance coverage protects against catastrophe, but not much else

By Thadeus Greenson
newsroom@northcoastjournal.com

The last month has been a particularly brutal one for the county of Humboldt's liability fund, which has hemorrhaged more than $670,000 in a settlement, attorney fees and an award for damages since May 10.

The payouts stem from three separate cases, all years in the making, and stand as a stark reminder in a time of tight budgets that a single mistake — whether it be a misguided policy or an unsafe turn in a county vehicle — can have large financial reverberations. And, the cases underscore that while the county's insurance policy is a much needed protection from financial catastrophe, it is far from a catchall safeguard of the county's coffers.

The first in the recent trio of budget gashes came on May 10, when the Board of Supervisors approved a $250,000 settlement stemming from a fatal car accident two years earlier involving a county employee. The accident itself, in addition to being devastating for all involved, is the stuff of nightmares for government administrators: On Jan. 3, 2014, a county employee driving a county truck on county business was heading southbound on Avenue of the Giants when, for unknown reasons, he made a left turn directly into the path of a Toyota Corolla driven by 26-year-old Jaime Wheeler. Wheeler's passenger, Jimmy Lincks Jr., died several days later of injuries that appeared to be sustained in the crash.

Wheeler and Lincks' son, Jimmy Lincks III, filed a wrongful death lawsuit a short time later, alleging that the crash was negligently caused by the county employee. The county denied the allegations, but commenced settlement talks.

Cases like these are precisely why government agencies have insurance. They can be devastating financially — consider the $1.6 million settlement the county reached over a 2013 fatal crash involving a parks employee and a cyclist that has the county mulling closing some parks. Back in 2014, the Board of Supervisors opted to pay higher premiums on its insurance policy in exchange for reducing its retention fee, which is akin to the deductible on your car insurance, from $500,000 to $100,000. That means if the county settles a wrongful death case for $1 million, it would be on the hook for $100,000 while the insurance pool would cover the other $900,000. But that change doesn't apply retroactively, meaning anything filed against the county in fiscal years 2012-2013 and 2013-2014 is still subject to the $500,000 retention fee. (Prior to 2012-2013, the retention fee was $150,000.)

That left the county to pay out the $250,000 settlement to Lincks III and Wheeler on its own. The money came out of the county's liability fund, which is part of its risk management budget that was given $2.73 million this fiscal year. According to county spokesperson Sean Quincey, the liability fund uses an actuarial formula that looks at each county department, taking into account recent losses and inherent risk (the sheriff's department, for instance, carries a lot of risk because it has many employees, most of whom carry guns and drive vehicles) to determine each department's contribution to the liability fund.

But the liability fund isn't just for payouts. Quincey said it's also used to pay investigators to vet claims and other expenses associated with lawsuits brought against the county, as well as to pay the county's insurance premiums.

It might be surprising for some to learn that while the county's insurance policy covers wrongful death and personal injury cases, it largely doesn't cover blunders. Take the case of former county employee Steve Hughes, who held a number of management positions in the Department of Health and Human Services until he left county employment in 2011. A year earlier, Hughes had been passed over for a promotion in favor of a less-qualified woman. Hughes sued, alleging he and other men in the female-dominated Employment Training Division were being discriminated against because they were males.

A jury ultimately agreed, awarding Hughes $60,000 in lost wages and $125,000 in emotional distress damages, a combined $185,000 hit to the county. In this case, according to Quincey, the county actually spent more than $125,000 defending itself, eating up its deductible, so the entire award was covered by insurance.

As Hughes' case suggests, governmental missteps can be pricey. Perhaps the best recent example of this is the "shaded parcels" lawsuit brought against the county by the Humboldt Coalition for Property Rights in 2012.

First, a brief background: The term "shaded parcels" refers to parcels in Humboldt County that may have been created illegally, and stems from the county's decades-long practice of using a pencil to shade in such parcels on the county's official parcel-map books, emblazoning them with a kind of "scarlet letter." Some of the parcels that wound up shaded were or are, in fact, illegal, having been created through subdivision that didn't go through the proper channels and processes. Others, however, were or are perfectly legal, their uncertain status stemming from a clerical error or some other mishap. And some fall into some shade of gray, their exact legal status still shrouded in mystery.

HumCPR felt this shading was abhorrent and sued to halt it, likening the practice of deeming a parcel shaded and putting the onus on the landowner to prove its legality to extortion. The county hired an outside attorney to handle the case and spent more than $88,000 in litigation, according to Quincey, though it's not entirely clear how much of that came from the county's liability fund.

Last fall, the county and HumCPR announced that they'd settled the lawsuit, reaching an agreement that both sides found acceptable. The county had long since stopped "shading" parcels, but now pledged to purge all records of the shading — including notations in internal parcel databases — save for a single publicly available list folks can check to see if a specific parcel's status is in question. Meanwhile, the planning department is continuing to work through the list — which once numbered more than 1,500 but currently lists fewer than 600 parcels — to determine the properties' legal status and advise their owners of the findings.

The impact of the settlement seems to be much in the eye of the beholder. Ask HumCPR about it, and the property rights advocacy group will say it ended an "injurious and illegal" practice at great benefit to the general public. But ask County Counsel Jeff Blanck or someone in the Planning Department, and you're likely to get more of a shrug. "From the county's perspective, it didn't change a whole lot," Blanck said, adding that — no matter what you want to call them or how you want to mark them — there are still parcels in the county with uncertain legal status, and county staff is working as quickly as it can to clear up the confusion and notify property owners of its findings.

Last month, Humboldt County Superior Court Judge Marilyn Miles shocked just about everyone watching when she ruled that not only should HumCPR get the $158,585 attorney fee reimbursement it was asking for, but also an additional almost $80,000 multiplier because HumCPR's attorneys —Timothy Needham and Bill Barnum — had incurred risk by taking the case on contingency, meaning they would only be paid for their work if their client prevailed in the case. In a press release announcing the award, HumCPR opined that Miles applied the legal-but-seldom-used multiplier in part due to the "particularly egregious acts taken by the county."

The attorney costs and fees sting the county, as the liability fund takes money directly out of the general fund, cash that could be used to address the huge and growing list of deferred road maintenance projects, purchase new equipment for the Sheriff's Office or start a housing trust fund ($238,000 could provide a lot of first and last months rent and security deposits). They sting all the more after hearing HumCPR's contention that it offered to settle this portion of the case for $75,000. (Blanck said if such an offer was made, it was well before he joined the county a little more than a year ago.)

Quincey said it's too early to tell if reducing the county's retention fee from $500,000 to $100,000 will ultimately make up the cost of a pricier premium, as none of the claims filed against the county since the change have resulted in payouts at this point. When the county voted to make that change in 2014, 5th District Supervisor Ryan Sundberg said he believed it would pencil out. "When you bring it down to $100,000, you start to shrink the risk," he said at the time.

In a sense that's true, but insurance groups have proven pretty adept at making sure increased costs accompany decreased risk. Ultimately, it seems the only way the county is really going to be able to shield itself from consistent litigation losses is to either stop making mistakes or spend for a policy that covers more than death and injury cases. ●

‘Marijuana’ Isn’t Racist

By Grant Scott-Goforth
newsroom@northcoastjournal.com

Last year, I watched a room full of white people cheer as a white grower told a panel of white lawmakers that the word “marijuana” was racist.

It wasn’t the first time I’d heard that particular line of thinking, and certainly wasn’t the last. It’s been repeated by many in the industry, from gentle reminders at public meetings to blog posts from Oakland-based weed heavyweight the Harborside Health Center. It’s gaining purchase in government circles.

At the aforementioned meeting — the Gavin Newsom visit to Garberville in May of 2015 — Assemblyman Jim Wood addressed the speaker shortly after his comments. “We hear you,” he told the crowd, assuring them he would trade the odious M-word for a safer alternative. He’s generally making good on that promise; the titles of his recent bills shaping the medical marijuana landscape all refer to cannabis.

But another panelist pointed out how the word “marijuana” is woven into the tapestry of our culture. Indeed, many upstanding organizations — whose monikers rely on “marijuana” — have fought for patient access to medical marijuana and common-sense reforms to pot laws: NORML and the Marijuana Policy Project, for example. And existing laws and governance rely heavily on the word.

Should organizations cling to a racist word simply out of tradition or because changing it might lead to confusion? Of course not. See: a Certain NFL Team.

It’s not a problem that people are being sensitive to perceptions of racism. That’s a good thing — as long as the movement and the outcomes are just. But the word war against marijuana is so unnecessary, so misguided and such a waste of effort that it’s frustrating to behold.

First of all, the word marijuana is not by definition racist. It does not refer to a person. It is not a portmanteau of some bygone racist terms. What seems to have started this trend is a handful of takes looking at the origin of the war on drugs.

As we all know, marijuana can go by a long list of names. As the industry budded, the acts of growing, possessing and using marijuana grew more specialized.

Week in Weed

Language's natural inclination to change and grow, coupled with the necessity to hide marijuana culture from authorities, has yielded a vast bounty of regional nicknames, slang, titles and other vernacular oddities. It's pretty cool, honestly, and somewhere a graduate student is pitching a thesis advisor to trace the twists and turns of pot language.

The leading train of thought against "marijuana" seems to indicate the term's common usage — and there's no question it's the most common term for weed in the U.S. — has its roots in racist manipulation.

The L.A. Review of Books somewhat hazily summed up that theory:

"A certain faction considers marijuana itself pejorative and racist, based on a longstanding theory that narcotics agents in the 1930s chose that word over the more scientific cannabis when crafting drug laws; the word is of Mexican-Spanish origin and thus, the belief is, sounded more exotic and sinister."

That marijuana prohibition was born out of racism — a desire to crack down on African-Americans and Latinos during the Jazz Era — is well-documented. Prohibition and enforcement of pot and other drugs proved to be an effective Civil-Rights-Era tool of control, as evidenced by this revelation from a Nixon administration official recounted in 1990s but not reproduced until recently: "We knew we couldn't make it illegal to be either against the war or black, but by getting the public to associate the hippies with marijuana and blacks with heroin, and then criminalizing both heavily, we could disrupt those communities."

And the continuing racism of prohibition is evidenced in copious reporting from the last decade, during which vast tracts of data were able to unequivocally show that people of color — who use drugs at the same rates as white people — are systematically punished for drug crimes at far higher rates.

These are very real problems that decimate communities, and talking about them — and shouting about them to our lawmakers — should never be seen as a fad, a PC-trend, an empty gesture. But for the most part, in my several years of North Coast marijuana reporting, systemic racism in the drug industry and enforcement worlds is not what people are shouting about. Which makes the "marijuana is racist" cry that much worse.

It's easy to imagine that during the Reefer Madness days, authorities sought to turn the general public against pot by giving it a foreign sounding name. Those kinds of campaigns still exist, unfortunately, but they prey on the racism of the populace. "Marijuana" — which directly translates to a common name, Mary Jane — is not a racist term, it's a word that played on the racist and xenophobic undercurrents of that era's public zeitgeist.

So, I've wondered for some time, what makes a bunch of farmers so focused on the injustice of that word? Is saying "marijuana is racist" just an easy way to feel good about oneself in an unjust world? Maybe. It's more difficult for people to stand up and say people convicted of drug felonies shouldn't be barred from the medical marijuana industry. That would be a far more effective act, but it's also far more politically odious, and requires a lot more courage. (For the record, I have seen people call for more meaningful action — it's rarer, but it's out there, and they should be applauded).

I think there's a more insidious notion behind "marijuana is racist." I think it's motivated by desire to whitewash weed. It's not an effort to confront racist laws and practices that continue to levy outsized punishments on this country's minorities; it's a desire to make marijuana sound safe again. It's playing directly into the very same racist undercurrents that continue to flourish under prohibition today.

Marijuana is still a hard sell — for all the talk about shifting perceptions, nearly half of California thinks marijuana should still be illegal. If marijuana advocates can rebrand it, can get the industry, the media, the lawmakers and the public to stop saying that scary, Spanish-sounding word, they'll have a much easier time convincing the public to go for legalization, to have recreational pot shops on bustling downtown street corners.

This all may sound cynical, but why else would a small farmer in Garberville care? The marijuana industry in California, Colorado and Washington has largely benefitted from the white privilege that allows it to avoid detection, prosecution and imprisonment and gives its ranks' ability to stand up and shout anything about marijuana to a panel of lawmakers.

So, please, white people, focus your energy on more meaningful ways to open the industry to people of color and women. Really think about why you've taken up a cause, what its long-term impacts may be.

The fight for better access to Humboldt's wild places

By Linda Stansberry
linda@northcoastjournal.com

We aren't beloved for our nightlife, our restaurant scene or weather. No, when asked what the best thing is about our corner of the world, most people have the same answer: the outdoors. We love our redwood forests, rivers and beaches. But sometimes we get so enraptured with the view we fail to see what's missing: access for our friends, neighbors and tourists who have disabilities.

Humboldt County has 110 miles of coastline and 680,000 acres of parks and forests. Of this vast blessing, there are only about 13 miles of trails in our state parks that meet Americans with Disabilities Act guidelines, even less in our national parks, about 20 miles of usable trails in Arcata, Eureka and McKinleyville combined, and two beaches with access. That is, as far as we can tell. Our research revealed that while some websites have incomplete lists of ADA-accessible trails and campgrounds, a comprehensive guide to what's actually available is difficult to find, although one might be in the works.

Tri-County Independent Living, a local nonprofit that helps individuals with disabilities access services, housing and peer support, is currently compiling a list of outdoor recreation sites accessible to people with mobility issues. The going is slow, mostly because some areas are mislabeled as ADA-accessible. Mary Bullwinkel, Tri-County's outreach and resource development coordinator, says she's reluctant to add anything to the guide that she hasn't personally verified.

"Sometimes the claim is that they are accessible, but they technically don't meet the accessibility guidelines," she says, adding that she will be visiting some trails and campgrounds in the upcoming months to inspect and take pictures. "I think it's extremely important that there be equal access for everyone to get into nature, go camping and picnicking. All of those opportunities should be available to anyone."

Charlie Bean, who will be traveling with Bullwinkel this summer, agrees. Bean has white hair and a soft, persuasive voice. A motorcycle accident in 1975 injured his spinal cord and ended his career with the Army. He wakes up depressed in the morning but says he shakes it off by remembering how much work there is left to do. Over the last 40 years he developed a career in finance and as a consultant with the United State Forest Service. Then, after retiring, he joined a staggering number of advocacy groups and committees devoted to helping the disabled. He lived in China for six years and married a Chinese woman who was also in a wheelchair. They adopted a baby daughter and battled with the U.S. Embassy to bring her back to California.

Bean carries a picture of his daughter, Bien Hou, with him in a pouch between his feet. She has thick, dark eyebrows and a mischievous smile. When she was younger, Bean used to fret over the state of Eureka's playgrounds, which were covered in woodchips, impossible for him to roll across. He worried how he would help her if she fell. She told him not to worry, that she wouldn't get hurt. She's 12 now. He still worries. He and his wife are divorced. Life goes on. Bean keeps rolling. On the back of his motorized transport there is a bumper sticker asking, "Does this wheelchair make my butt look big?"

When he was younger, and still using a manual wheelchair, Bean would push himself over the Samoa Bridge and along State Route 255 to visit the bars in Arcata.

"The trip back sobered you right up," he says. Now his chair has a motor and Bean, 59, doesn't get around as much as he once did. But he still serves on several committees, advises the Humboldt County Association of Governments and is executive director for the California In-Home Supportive Services Consumer Alliance. The Board of Supervisors is familiar with the sight of Bean making his way to the podium. He speaks often with Tom Mattson, the county's Public Works director, and with Dan Fulks, director of Human Resources. His soft voice is a familiar one to them on the phone, gently pointing out what many of us don't see, the things that are missing.

Thanks to the advocacy of Bean and others, the Humboldt Transit Authority will be lowering the timetables on bus stops so they can be read by people in wheelchairs. Bus drivers will make louder announcements for the benefit of the sight and hearing impaired. Things aren't perfect — the county still hasn't brought all of its buildings into compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act per an agreement in 2008, with budget shortfalls being blamed for the delay. But Bean says government entities are much more responsive now than they were when he began this journey in the 1980s, back when few business owners or service providers wanted to be responsible for the costs of accommodating the disabled.

> "For me, I personally think that Humboldt County has come a long way."
> — Charlie Bean

"For me, I personally think that Humboldt County has come a long way," Bean says. "They're addressing issues that have been brought up."

And on the nature side of things, Bean gestures to the planned expansion of Eureka's Waterfront Trail, which, when completed, may link the Hikshari' Trail in south Eureka to the Humboldt Bay Trail (still in conceptualization), making it possible for him to once again go to Arcata for a few beers, should his battery hold out. The completed stretches between the Samoa Bridge and the Eureka Boardwalk include docks where people on wheelchairs can roll down to fish during high tide, a sensory garden for the sight-impaired and wide paths that accommodate scooters, wheelchairs and bikes. A public facility built to accommodate people with disabilities increases rather than limits its potential, Bean stresses. Everyone can share the path. He wants the community, not just the government, to create spaces with the needs of the disabled in mind. Businesses, governments and planning departments should ask people with ADA issues what they need, rather than making assumptions.

"People tell me all the time, 'I made this for you,' and I say, 'You did? Why didn't you ask me what I needed?'" he says. "Stop looking at the chair, look at the people."

One of the challenges to finding and creating ADA-accessible wilderness is the relative age of many parks and trails, which were established long before the Americans with Disabilities Act was signed in 1990. Retrofitting these areas can be a challenge, if not an impossibility. Removing redwood trees or roots to widen and smooth a trail is rarely an option, for example. No one would approve of leveling a ridge into a meadow. And, Bean and Bullwinkel say, no one is actually asking for that. All they ask is that the ADA community be considered when something is first built. That's much easier. A good example, Bean says, is the McKay Tract, soon to be known as Redwood Community Forest, on the southeast edge of Eureka. As usual, Bean has put in his two cents.

"I'd like to see community support for one trail developed for all disabled people," he says. "With interpretive tools for the blind and the hearing-impaired, also with room for people in wheelchairs."

> Stop looking at the chair, look at the people."
> — Charlie Bean

Hank Seemann, deputy director of Humboldt County's Environmental Services Department, hears him. Seemann has done a lot of research into how to accommodate Bean and his peers as the McKay tract plan moves forward.

"I did kind of a deep dive into the standards and guidelines of accessible trails," he says. "They require a firm and stable surface, but what does that mean in practice? When there are different slopes, if they exceed a certain threshold they need resting spots. It gets very technical, and there's the question of what's feasible within a landscape."

California State Parks' guidelines for accessibility, one of the resources consulted by Seemann, speak to the fine line between making nature accessible and making it unnatural.

"People come to State Parks primarily to experience nature; consequently the built settings in the parks must be designed to fit into a natural environment without destroying the experience people come to enjoy," the guidelines caution. "For this reason it is not always desirable to create settings that appear too overbuilt or overdesigned. The challenge for park designers, managers, rangers and maintenance staff is to understand what people of all abilities need to use the park without compromising the qualities of the natural or cultural resource."

Seemann says he reached out for Bean's input and consultation, and the county is ready to try and make the version of a fully-accessible trail, but there's one wrinkle standing in their way.

"It's essentially landlocked," Seemann says, meaning there aren't currently easements to drive through and reach the land. "Our top priority continues to be developing appropriate access points that are compatible with adjacent property, don't create traffic impacts, and meet ADA standards. We're in the process of developing plans for access points at a variety of locations so the public will be able to park and travel to the future trail system."

In other words, you can build a beautiful, multi-use trail, but if wheelchair users can't pull up and offload their gear before setting off, what's the point?

The issue of easements and vehicular access also came up during a recent project in McKinleyville. The Chah-GAH-Cho Trail, whose gentle slopes are now being lined with crushed rock and pounded smooth, wends through a meadow just south of the Mill Creek Cinema. It's a small oasis of natural land, tucked between the theater, an apartment complex and a shopping center. It includes views of the Arcata Bottoms and the ocean, and its main loop is a flat, even surface. A parking lot will be in place soon. It's perfect. But it took 20 years for it to happen.

The main issue, says Leonel Arguello, vice president of the McKinleyville Land Trust, was access, then funding. The land trust purchased the spot in 1994, but little was done with it. Lack of an easement through adjacent land prevented access and development; a lack of funding prolonged its stasis. When Arguello first visited the spot as a consultant in 1996, much of it was still open, but the intervening years saw an invasion of blackberries and non-native species. It was unrecognizable when he returned two decades later. When funding finally came through, thanks to the help of the Redwood Community Action Agency, the land had to be reclaimed. Prison camp felled trees. A Hoopa tribal conservation group and the Sheriff's Work Alternative Program helped with vegetation management. Arguello himself visited almost daily to roust homeless people camped in the bushes, asking them to move on.

"This view did not exist," Arguello says, gesturing to the vistas of water and farmland. In addition to the encroachment of berry vines and trees, people had been using the spot as a place to dump household trash. Now that the meadow is a meadow again, a California Conservation Corps crew is cutting grade and laying down the rock, preparing Chah-GAH-Cho for its grand opening later this year. (The trail received its name during a dedication ceremony in 1994. Chah-GAH-Cho is a translation of the Wiyot word for "not far away," possibly because the site was close to a waterfall on Mill Creek.)

A wide spectrum of people, from those in wheelchairs to those using walkers, will be able to use the loop, stopping to rest at a bench that looks out on the highway and beyond that, the ocean. The more adventurous or mobile may be able to go up a small hill into the trees. The trail may soon join up with the local HealthSPORT parking lot, offering gym rats a chance to integrate nature into their regimens. A local Boy Scout Troop will design interpretive signs. Just across the freeway is the Hammond Trail, which stretches from Arcata to Clam Beach and stands as another bright spot for disabled adventurers. Does the land trust foresee a future when Chah-GAH-Cho is no longer an island, but connected to a larger network of trails? Arguello smiles.

"Strategically, the dream is to connect it to the other trails," he says. But that's a long way off. In the meantime, fingers are crossed that the owner of the nearby parcel won't build another apartment complex, obscuring that hard-won view.

> "The great outdoors are even more important for people with mobility issues."
> — Michael Muir

On June 26, Redwood National Park will celebrate the National Park Service's centennial with a day of storytelling, tours, pony rides, music and exhibits. Among the speakers will be Michael Muir, great-grandson of famed naturalist John Muir, who has become famous in his own right as the founder of Access Adventure, which provides recreational carriage driving, educational opportunities and equine therapy for people with disabilities. The group will offer carriage rides through the redwoods to wheelchair users and people with mobility issues.

"People who are in a wheelchair or have trouble getting around can tend to get isolated and housebound," says Muir, who has lived with multiple sclerosis since he was 15 years old. "The great outdoors are even more important for people with mobility issues."

Muir says Humboldt County residents "are blessed to live in one of the most beautiful places in the world," and that a small measure of foresight can make a huge difference in making those places accessible to everyone. He recently climbed the highest mountain in Scotland, Ben Nevis, in his wheelchair. He says the trail to the peak was both well-built and well-planned.

"It was done with natural steps and natural gradations. It was very wheelchair-accessible," he says. Keeping the considerations of the ADA community in mind, he says, makes a "better trail for everyone."

Bean agrees. He has yet to take advantage of some of the local options for ADA adventures, such as the specialized wheelchair available to rent at Crescent City's Gold Bluffs Beach, which has wide tires that can navigate sand. Camping and using the beach would require some extra help, and Bean cherishes his independence. But he does plan on going to the centennial celebration and taking a ride on Muir's carriage.

In the meantime, his efforts to keep the unmet needs of the disabled community at the forefront of local discussions have received a small boost, one that might go unnoticed if you don't know where to look for it: There is now a ramp leading to the dais in Supervisors Chambers in the courthouse and a lower microphone, so his voice might be better heard.

LET'S GROW GREENER

PLANTING TIPS:

It's not to late to get all those tender annuals and veggies in. Now is the time to plant corn, beans, squash, cucumbers, basil, impatiens, coleus, and marigolds.

How much is to much? Soon the summer drought will set in. New plantings should be watered weekly depending on your soil type and the weather. Over and under watering stresses plants leaving them susceptible to disease. Fewer and longer soakings will encourage a deeper root system resulting in stronger, healthier plants.

Blackspot on Roses - Roses are beautiful and will bloom all summer long but are susceptible to "Blackspot". By the end of the summer or sooner, they are practically defoliated. Keep Blackspot away by regular sprayings of fungicides such as Neem (organic) or Garden Disease Control. Spray every 10 days without fail.

Spittlebugs - Spittlebugs, or frog-hoppers, are easily identified by the frothy, white foam that protects them from predators. Wingless young feed on plant sap. In large numbers these insects can damage growth. They are easy to control by washing them off with a strong stream of water or hand picking.

Prune the Spruce - June is the best month to prune your conifers. A good rule of thumb is not to remove more the 1/2 of the green growth. Avoid pruning cuts in inactive areas (no leaves or needles). Pinch pine 'candles' by half to encourage bushier growth.

Shade Hangers - Do you have a shady spot for a hanging basket? Try tuberous begonias, fuchsias, lobelia, impatiens, ferns, Heuchera, trailing pansies, Creeping Jenny and Tasmanian Violet. A combination of all these plants will make a beautiful basket.

Humboldt Video Roundup

Local YouTube art on your couch

By Gabrielle Gopinath
artbeat@northcoastjournal.com

Trippy commerce in "Burn One with Nixon- 3D." YouTube

I know: The timing is counter-intuitive. Summer is supposed to be the season for doing things outdoors: swimming at the river, hiking, fishing and biking. But without detracting one iota from those pleasures, this article advocates for the less strenuous summer activity of watching regionally themed YouTube videos indoors, in the name of art. Peep them with no eye to productivity. Watch them at noon with hot light slanting through the shutters, or at night while daddy-longlegs agitate against the screen door. Do it just to be a contrarian. It's a choice against the grain.

If you like unclassifiable productions from artists' collectives, genre-busting documentaries and passionate pitches from local gurus/savants/entrepreneurs: good news! You may already enjoy access to a video archive that would be the envy of any earlier moving-picture scholar or Humboldt anthropologist.

The following list ranks a few of the short, independently made, low- or-no-budget films that someone local has posted on YouTube, the world's largest free video-sharing service. I watched pretty much every YouTube video tagged "Arcata" so you didn't have to. No one ever said art criticism would be easy.

Rigorous criteria were applied throughout the process of review. I selected only those videos that seemed uncommonly interesting as moving image experiences in their own rights. For the sake of a theme, I focused on five favorites that illuminated aspects of regional character. Some are documentaries; some were created with commercial intent. Some are simply indescribable. They all watch pretty well in the heat.

1. Jensen Rufe and Steve Love, "Orick, CA, USA."

During his time as a Humboldt State University film student in the late 1990s, filmmaker Jensen Rufe made short documentaries about Humboldt landmarks that continue to be passed down locally through word of mouth. I've now met several people who agree that these films represent one of the high points of self-reflection in our local cinema verité. Rufe and Love stay behind the camera for the most part, talking us through his research in a wry, laconic fashion that recalls the stylings of '80s documentarian Ross McElwee, best known for Sherman's March.

Orick stars here in a Faulknerian turn as a half-abandoned hamlet in a picturesque degradation that seems terminal. Rufe introduces us to cops, burl salesmen and the self-declared town poet. The tour moves from the forest to the rodeo to the foggy beach, where Rufe interviews a woman who bursts unprompted into a wistful song that may haunt your dreams or nightmares.

2. Jensen Rufe, "The Ugliest Fountain in the World (Without a Doubt)." (1999)

Rufe wrote: "this 16 mm black and white film was my MA thesis for grad school at Humboldt State University in Arcata, CA. It is a 13 minute documentary about my attempt to uncover how an ungodly ugly fountain ended up resting for 40 years in the middle of our campus in front of the art building (of all places!), and also about my attempts to get the fountain renovated and/or destroyed." The meditation on public art gets very meta here.

3. The Humboldt Live Sessions: the HiLL

Chuck Johnson's long-running YouTube series presents live, on-location recordings of performances staged by Humboldt musicians at an impressive variety of sites. Locations include: the E&O bowling alley ("Water Tower"), the vista spot off Fickle Hill Road known as Top of the World ("The 51 Cards"), fields of flowers inside the vast Sun Valley greenhouses ("Green & Lilac") and, of course, the quasi-mythical place referenced in the episode title/band name.

Documentary footage of the people and places involved in growing marijuana remains regrettably underrepresented on the 'tube, for obvious reasons. With this video, Humboldt Sessions preserves requisite discretion by adopting a music-video format, in which images have distance from explanatory text.

The clip opens with a long shot on a rippling flag emblazoned with the 1968 "Earthrise" image — a courtly nod to 1960s growers and the persistence of their holistic hippie ways. The sun shines down; in the greenhouse, all you can see are overlapping layers of jagged, sawtoothed leaves in shades of emerald green. A punkgrass band that plays in the manner of Hank III lets rip beneath the tarp as the camera swoops woozily around, zooming in on tribal tattoos. The plants seem to soak up the vibes.

Whether intentionally or not, the clip calls back in a wonderful way to an important prototype for the music video genre — the Beatles promotional film that Michael Lindsay-Hogg shot in the Chiswick House conservatory in May 1966 for "Paperback Writer." Make of that what you will.

4 & 5. ArcataSmokeShop. "The Time Traveler Shop" and "Burn One with Nixon-3D"

Our host "Chet" promises, "I've got some movies to show you that'll trip your head," but actually his unhinged infomercials were already doing exactly that. They were created as promotional material for the now-defunct Arcata Smoke Shop, which allegedly flourished from 1986 – 2011 at Eighth and J streets in Arcata ("Just think of an eighth, and think of a J"), purveying "antique, vintage and ultra-modern pipes from all over the world" to generations of locals and HSU students.

The shop was well named. Everything about this gentleman's look is vintage, from the op-art effects that dominate his video editing to his outsized water pipe molded in the likeness of Richard Nixon. The Smoke Shop will be missed. On the bright side, the author responsible for the account wrote in one of his last YouTube communications in 2011 that he planned to spend retirement "working on 3D movies in the primeval forest."

Spring Curry

Saag paneer with wild mustard leaves

By Kevin Smith
tabletalk@northcoastjournal.com

Ever since we were kids, when springtime came around, my brother and I would browse patches of wild mustard greens while out in the fields. The spicy, sharp flavor always reminds me of days in the old orchards. While these greens are delectable sautéed with onion and bits of bacon as a side dish to a roast chicken or a fillet of fish, one of my all-time favorite ways to prepare mustard greens is in a traditional Indian curry called saag.

This dish consists of a greens-based curry infused with tomato, onion and a broad array of spices. Typically saag will either contain chicken or paneer, a fresh farmer's cheese, though I have enjoyed using wild-harvested small game as well. In most parts of India, saag is made with spinach, however, in certain regions where mustard is grown for its seeds for making cooking oil, the leaves are often substituted for spinach. While wild mustard is not native to California, it's one of the most common plants I encounter on walks, and since spinach is the most expensive ingredient in a good saag, making this dish with wild mustard is fun, easy and free. As an added bonus, it is absolutely delicious.

Keep in mind that while mustard is used in cuisines throughout the world, some people experience slight allergies to it. As with any new food in your diet, always try a small portion the first time and take note of how it affects you before diving in and eating three plates of curry.

Wild mustard can be easily identified by characteristic features such as its distinct cluster of bright yellow flowers in contrast the emerald green leaves and light green stalk in the spring. The leaves of the mustard plant are toothed and somewhat lobed, and seeds can be found developing in small pods all along the top of the stalk just below the flowering head. Crush a leaf and smell it, then give it a nibble. The aroma and flavors are distinct and reminiscent of horseradish.

When seeking out a stand of wild mustard to harvest, consider the following. First, the environment the mustard grows in will vary. Significant small-leaf bearing plants can be found on the sand bars of the Mad River, though larger leaf-bearing subspecies will be found in darker wet soils in full sun along meadows, such as in the Arcata Bottoms. Second, when harvesting you must be respectful of private land. Trespassing is no joke, though many landowners are more than happy to accommodate a forager looking to eat a few of the "weeds" growing in his or her pastures. Third, it is important to consider possible contamination when you are planning to harvest any wild edible, as many areas may be polluted or sprayed with herbicides and pesticides. Roadsides, vacant lots and areas around power lines and power poles should be avoided. Once a patch has been located, wear gloves when harvesting, as the mature leaves will be covered by coarse, prickly hairs. These spiky hairs quickly wilt when blanched in boiling water, so both young and mature leaves are perfectly suitable for making a good saag.

Wild Mustard Saag Paneer

Making the curry takes roughly 45 minutes but the paneer, for which you will need a cheesecloth, must be made a few hours ahead. Serves four.

For the curry:
1 pound wild mustard leaves
4 tablespoons vegetable oil or ghee (Indian clarified butter), divided
1 14-ounce can chopped tomatoes
1 yellow onion, diced
⅛ cup heavy cream
2 tablespoons garam masala
2 tablespoons ground cumin
2 tablespoons ground coriander
1 tablespoon turmeric powder
Chili powder to taste
Salt to taste

For the paneer:
1 gallon whole milk
Juice of two lemons

First, make the paneer. Pour the milk into a pot and heat it to a low boil. Add the lemon juice and stir slowly. When the curds separate from the whey (which will turn greenish yellow from the added juice), pour the contents through a fine wire strainer and place the curds on a cheesecloth. Bundle up these curds in the cheesecloth and place it in a bowl with a heavy can or plate on top of the bundle to press out extra moisture. Place it in the refrigerator for at least 2 hours ahead of time when planning your saag. I find making the paneer the night before streamlines the process and allows ample time for this delicious farmer's cheese to firm up. Once the paneer is a single solid block, cut it into ½-inch cubes.

Now prepare the saag. Blanch the mustard greens in boiling water for at least 3 to 5 minutes. Then puree the leaves in a food processor until they have a smooth consistency. A little water may be added if needed. In a large saucepan, heat 3 tablespoons of oil or ghee and add the garam masala, cumin, coriander, turmeric and onion. Sauté until the onion is translucent.

In a separate pan, add 1 tablespoon oil or ghee and sear the paneer cubes on all sides over medium-high heat so they are slightly golden brown. Paneer will not melt, so do not worry. Set the browned paneer aside.

Add the tomatoes to the spices and onion, and sauté 5 minutes. Now add the pureed mustard greens. Cook them an additional 2 minutes. Add the paneer and gently stir until all the cubes are coated with gravy so that the flavors are fully absorbed. Simmer for 15 minutes longer before gently stirring in the cream, chili powder and salt to taste. Serve over steamed basmati or jasmine rice.

Founded in 2009 by local business owners, Humboldt Made wants to embrace everything Humboldt has to offer. This April, during the Fourth Annual Buyers Tour, large market buyers visited Humboldt to experience our region's chocolatiers, glassblowers, coffee roasters and cheese makers.

The group got a caffeinated jump with a tour of Humboldt Bay Coffee Roasters, a microroaster of super premium beans. Located in Old Town Eureka for more than 20 years, Thomas and Luci Ramirez are supported by a dedicated crew of suspiciously upbeat employees. Might it be the coffee?

Next we headed to the shiny factory floor of Dick Taylor Chocolate. Dustin Taylor walked us through a complex narrative whereby raw cacao pods are transformed into sleekly packaged chocolate bars. Ready for lunch, the group trooped up to Redwood Acres for a whirlwind showcase of the businesses operating at Eureka's fairgrounds. Many local startups, such as Ohana Organics and Rover's Choice, got their feet wet by utilizing the collective resources at Redwood Acres.

On Friday everyone met at the Foodworks Culinary Center in Arcata. They were treated to whole grain rolls from Beck's Bread, sweet potato pie from Sistah's Vegan Café and cinnamon raisin bagels from Arise Gluten Free Bakery. Refueled with hot chai tea from Planet Teas, the group moved next door to learn about the art of recycled glassware at Fire & Light's workshop.

As every year, the buyers were sad to leave our coastal green pastures, making hopeful plans to return to the redwoods soon. The meticulous collaboration required for Buyers Tour each year is immense, but once the wheels are motion, showing off the fruits of Humboldt Made businesses was a piece of Humboldt pie.

Rhonda Wiedenbeck started Beck's Bakery three and a half years ago with the hope of bringing fresh, stone milled bread to the community. Beck's is now sold in natural food stores throughout the county as well as local Farmer's Markets. Rhonda is passionate about using local grains bought directly from the farmer. Beck's has joined the nationwide local grains movement. Beck's recently expanded out of the county into select Healdsburg wineries. Six Rivers Brewery is now using certain products from Beck's as well. Rhonda hopes to supply them with all of their bread needs. Get Busy Living and Get Busy Deading

thesetlist@northcoastjournal.com

The David Nelson Band plays Friday, June 10 at 7:30 p.m. at Beginnings in Redway.

As much as it might make my life easier here in Humboldt County, I cannot pretend, nor claim, to be a Grateful Dead fan — hereinafter referred to as "Dead Head" — of the highest order.

Although I knew a few fans growing up in L.A., The Dead just weren't really in my musical orbit during my teenage years. I tended to lean toward music less optimistic and "feel-good" than The Dead — I don't know if this was a good or a bad thing — but that all began to change when I moved to Humboldt County.

My first year in the dorms at HSU put me in direct contact with plenty of 18-year-old Dead Heads and I was exposed to endless jams by the band, with Phish occasionally making a sonic appearance down the hall. I can't say that I was immediately turned on, but I was at least exposed. My roommate at the time was a die-hard gangster rap fan (Biggie, Tupac etc.) but would oddly crank the occasional Doors album or American Beauty and Blues for Allah by The Dead (go figure).

Getting a job in radio is when I started to understand The Dead. Although I still can't claim to have half my house taken up with bootleg recordings, I can now say I fully appreciate the band. That came about by the special relationship we as a county have with The Dead. Being close to the epicenter of Dead Country, Humboldt received a mass influx of folks fleeing the unnaturalness of city life in the '60s, many of them already musically enlightened Dead Heads who would shape the musical soul of Humboldt County.

Although a sad story and maybe a side note, it perhaps bears mentioning that 5-year-old Jerome Garcia was on a family vacation in and around Arcata when his fly-fishing father drowned in the Trinity River.

Anyone who's lived in Humboldt for a few years knows there is a certain Deadness to the fabric of musical life here in Humboldt. It's for that reason, and perhaps also related to a certain type of flower grown in our hills, that many of the Grateful Dead family keep coming back, year after year, festival after festival, to what we call home. Will Bobby or Phil come up here any time soon to jam? It's doubtful, but luckily enough, this weekend we have multiple members of the extended Dead family playing in Humboldt. Read below for more info, and keep on truckin'.

Thursday

If you're wanting to ease into the weekend, you've got a great chance to check out some good local jazz with Brian Post & Friends, who will be at the Palm Lounge in the Eureka Inn at 7 p.m. It'll be a free show so your list of excuses just got a lot shorter. Go support local jazz musicians.

Friday

Another heavy hitter returns to Humboldt County to delight and please our local Dead Head community. The David Nelson Band will take the stage at Beginnings in Redway around 7:30 p.m. The one time Wildwood Boy, New Rider of the Purple Sage, and Grateful Dead contributor seems to enjoy returning to our strange trippy neck of the woods, and we should be grateful for that. Expect maybe one or two Dead songs if you're lucky and you know the jams will be top notch. Opening this $30 show will be Francine Allen and Delaney Holland who start things off around 6:30 p.m.

Back up Northern Humboldt way you find the BPBS fest continuing in Arcata at The Sanctuary at 8 p.m. as a plethora of artists provide an improvised soundtrack to Akira Kurosawa's 1990 film, Dreams. As the film is projected, bands will perform — behind the screen I think — creating an impromptu musical score. $12 will get you in the door to the all ages show, where you can hear the following bands contribute their partial soundtracks: Datura Blues, Electro Kraken, Beat Totem, ORRRA, Opossum Suntrail, Johnathan KipP, Die Geister Beschwören and Leone. Got it?

At The Miniplex — which I've been accidentally referring to as Richard's Goat Tavern and Tea Room for a while now — you'll find The Stargazer Lillies gigging to support their latest album, which I hear will please those who have an affinity for Joy Division and My Bloody Valentine. Joining the Lillies at 9 p.m. will be locals Gobi Blank and "Arcata Krautrockers" D3D. Bring $5 for this three-band bill.

Blue Lake hosts Kingfoot at the Logger Bar with Blue Laker Snubby J on the now-famous RimbaTubes for a free 9 p.m. show.

Dead fans have another opportunity to hear an artist who has been in and out of the Jerry circle for a long while. Melvin Seals and JGB return to Humboldt County and Humboldt Brews at 9:30 p.m. You know what to expect from the sweet and rippin' sounds of his B-3 which never disappoints the crowd. $25 ticket price, but grab 'em while you can.

Saturday

Cafe Mokka has a free all ages show tonight at 8 p.m. Head on down and before you soak in the tubs listen to the "Eastern Euro" sounds of locals Chubritza.

The BPBS fest continues at The Miniplex as Datura Blues release its new album Serpent of the Obsidian Knives, which has been five years in the making. Along for the ride are Portland friends Beat Totem and Electro Kraken, who will start this $5 show off around 9 p.m.

Missed Melvin Seals and JGB last night? Or just want to ride the waves again? They're back at Humboldt Brews, same time and same price as last night.

Ian of The Alibi informs me some angsty-indie-rock will be provided at said venue by locals Chachi Hands who will be closing out the show after the "queer punk" from Grass Valley rockers Slutzville fills the Alibi at 11 p.m. As usual, this Alibi show will be $5, supports Humboldt Free Radio, and will go late.

Sunday

Made it to enough shows this weekend? It's not even technically summer yet, but it seems that things aren't slowing down here in Humboldt County. The weekend's not technically over, so if you want a nice musical end to the week, head over to The Lighthouse Grill in Trinidad to hear the sweet and powerful voice of Dee Hemingway, who will be performing at 5 p.m. for free. ●

Full show listings in the Journal*'s Music and More grid, the Calendar and online. Bands and promoters, send your gig info, preferably with a high-res photo or two, to* music@northcoastjournal.com.

Andy Powell is a congenital music lover and hosts The Night Show on KWPT 100.3 FM weeknights at 6 p.m. He is not as grateful as he should be.

Be en pointe this weekend. Catch The *Best of Trillium, Saturday, June 11, at 6 p.m. and Sunday, June 12, at 2 p.m. at the Van Duzer Theatre ($15-$10), featuring the dance ensemble and junior ensemble's favorite dancing moments from the last 10 years. Or see Trinity Ballet Academy salute movies and Broadway in Ballet Americana at the Arkley Center for the Performing Arts at 3:30 p.m. on Saturday, June 11.

Um, California and Oregon? Your junk is out. This weekend, the Humboldt Junkies Flea Market and Vintage Trailer Rally rolls out the welcome mat in Rohner Park on Friday, June 10 from 4 to 9 p.m. ($5) and Saturday, June 11 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. ($3) to let the public tour vintage glampers, enjoy live music and food, and peruse interesting and eclectic finds.

It's our first dance with Mary Jane — the film, that is. On Friday, June 10 at 8 p.m. at the Eureka Theater, Mary Jane: A Musical Potumentary debuts ($20, $15 advance). The documentary, based on Dell'Arte's wildly popular show features plenty of local faces and songs about pot's impact and future in Humboldt, plus a cameo by Ed Asner.

Tales of the City

Ever wonder what went on behind closed doors in some of your favorite Old Town haunts? Eureka is steeped in colorful history; find it at the Humboldt County Historical Society's Raise the Roof: Tales of Old Town, a fundraiser with dinner, music, cocktails and a peek into yesteryear this Friday, June 10 at 6 p.m. at the Eagle House Victorian Inn ($75).

Local historian Alex Service has the scoop on who's who from Humboldt's heyday. Hear tawdry tales about Eureka's infamous nightlife from the 1860s to 1930s. Back then, instead of coffee shops and bookstores, Old Town had 32 brothels and 65 saloons, including the Glo Room at the Hotel Monte Carlo, where torch singer Margaret "Muzzy" Paul sang. Vocal artist Claire Bent and her band the Lonesome Sunday Quartet will bring the 1940s to life in a tribute to Paul, known as "The Last of the Red Hot Mamas."

Feast on salmon or prime rib and hear tales of the area's wilder times courtesy of longtime residents Evo Fanucchi, Laurie Lazio and Bill Williams. Money raised from the event goes to a new roof over the Humboldt County Historical Society's digs, the historic Barnum House. Tip your bartender.

Sunday in the Park with Wine

Summer's here and it seems like everything is happening "in the park" or "by the bay." Not that we're complaining. If you enjoy the sound of a cork popping followed by the splash of a little class hitting your glass, then there's one "in the park" event you don't want to miss. Fortuna Rotary Club's annual Art & Wine in the Park on Sunday, June 12 from noon to 4 p.m. at Rohner Park (free admission, $25 tasting glass), is an afternoon of the finer things in life: wine, cheese, art, music and food. There's Chardonnay to sip and sherry to swirl from local, regional and California wineries.

The event, now in its 27th year, features the popular Wine Tasting School where you can refine your palate to an estimable level of snoot. You can also try your luck at taking home a sweet (or dry) prize from the wine raffle, peruse the arts and crafts booths, and pair your drink perfectly at the food booth with Humboldt Bay Oysters and strawberries or heartier fare like burgers and pulled pork sandwiches. And no "in the park" festival would be complete without live music. The Delta Nationals keep things rockin' all afternoon to help you go with the flow.

THE LOBSTER. David (Colin Farrell), a man living either in the near future or an alternate reality, has recently been left by his wife of 11 years. But being single is against the law in this world, so David heads to a mysterious resort hotel in which all the guests are given 45 days to find a partner among their fellows. Should they fail, their only recourse is to be turned into the animal of their choice. David expresses his desire to the hoteliers to be turned into a lobster ("they live for a hundred years and they're blue-blooded, like rich people").

Greek director Yorgos Lanthimos has earned a reputation in recent years for crafting films out of the mainstream that have more to them than first meets the eye, most notably in 2007's excellent Dogtooth. In this, his first English-language feature (which scored the Jury Prize at last year's Cannes Film Festival), Lanthimos has crafted a harrowing, singularly dreamlike film.

As The Lobster unfolds, it's clear there is more to the story beyond the premise of humans being turned to animals. No one in the film other than David has a name; the hotel's "guests" are known by their characteristics and habits: Limping Man, Lisping Man or Biscuit Woman. The partner-seeking denizens are a rather sad lot, and all seem to have a robotic, Asperger-like misunderstanding of human interactions. They're guided to a series of drab, almost laughably strange dances, mixers and outdoor activities, and forced to attend live-action propaganda from the hotel's staff extolling the virtues of being in a settled relationship.

As David attempts a match, things take a darker turn and we meet the Loners, people who live in the woods surrounding the hotel and are just as dedicated to the idea of unattachment as civilized society is with companionship, right down to making it law. The leader of the Loners (Lea Seydoux, Blue is the Warmest Color) allows David to settle in with them, provided that he not fall in love or even flirt with any of them, which becomes dangerous when an attraction develops between him and one of the Loners (Rachel Weisz).

Lanthimos clearly means to explore the idea that looking for love in the modern world can lead to foolish choices — people at the hotel, for example, are merely seeking out the similarly afflicted, someone with the same limp, the same near-sightedness or the same degree of heartlessness (a sly satirical jab at online dating services offering a perfect match with a stranger). Profoundly unsettling and dreamlike, The Lobster works much more often than not (and more so in its first half than second), sharply commenting on how society pressures us to forge relationships, and some of the self-deception and delusion that can result. R. 118M. BROADWAY.

POPSTAR: NEVER STOP NEVER STOPPING. Lonely Island's famed digital shorts were more than just a component, though a very funny one, of Saturday Night Live. Andy Samberg and company's hysterical concoctions forged a new short-form genre of comedy somewhere between music videos and viral video. Popstar has a leg up over the decades of mixed bag SNL-to-cinema efforts. Since Samberg, with cohorts Akiva Schaffer and Jorma Taccone, are importing a snarky sensibility, rather than just a character from five-minute live sketches that have already worn out their welcome, they have more room to get loose. And by wisely making Popstar a mockumentary, a format with roots in musical mockery stretching back to This is Spinal Tap (1984), the Lonely Island lads made a deft move.

Now, mentioning it in the same sentence as the iconic Spinal Tap is a bold statement, so I'll dial it back and say Popstar clocks in at very amusing, at times hilarious, but people will not be reciting lines from it three decades from now. But the Islanders choose a subject ripe for skewering, with Samberg playing the Justin Bieber-esqe Connor, himself a former member of the Style Boyz before band mate Lawrence (Schaffer) angrily spilt, with DJ Own (Taccone) staying behind to be part of the Connor entourage. There is much establishing of Connor's vain, hyper-tweeting, surrounded-by-yes-men persona, interspersed with clips of Lawrence's new life as an embittered rural farmer. Meanwhile, sales of Connor's newest album are lagging badly, not helped by a disastrous rollout involving a nationwide power outage (it would take too much explaining how, but trust me that it's funny).

The cameos come fast and furious, and there's something pretty damn amusing about watching interviews with such hip-hop luminaries as Usher, Nas and Questlove speaking earnestly about Connor's music and fame. Sarah Silverman is underutilized as Connor's publicist ("Connor's stardom is a fact of life, just like oxygen, gravity or clinical depression") but fellow SNL alum Tim Meadows fares better as Connor's exasperated manager, and a running gag parodying TMZ's obnoxiousness through the end credits is priceless. The best elements of the movie are of course Samberg/Connor's videos and songs, which are deployed just enough to keep Popstar moving at a brisk pace. R. 86M. BROADWAY, MILL CREEK.

Previews

THE CONJURING 2. Director James Wan brings back Vera Farmiga and Patrick Wilson as grim ghost busters, this time in the UK where a single mother of four (already scary) is beset by spirits. R. 133M. BROADWAY, FORTUNA, MILL CREEK.

NOW YOU SEE ME 2. The merry band of magicians (Mark Ruffalo, Jessie Eisenberg, Lizzy Caplan) returns only to be strong-armed into a job by a Muggle tech villain (Daniel Radcliffe). PG13. 115M. BROADWAY, FORTUNA, MILL CREEK.

WARCRAFT. Can the sound of orcs roaring in the big-screen incarnation of the massive multiplayer online role-playing game draw devotees from their computers? Or will they heat up another Hot Pocket and stream it? PG13. 123M. BROADWAY, FORTUNA, MILL CREEK.

Continuing

ALICE THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS. Strong actors in a gaudy, hot mess of CGI indulgence that abandons Lewis Carroll's story and pits Alice (Mia Wasikowska) against Time (Sacha Baron Cohen). With Helena Bonham Carter and Johnny Depp. PG. 113M. BROADWAY, FORTUNA, MILL CREEK.

THE ANGRY BIRDS MOVIE. From your iPhone to the big screen, grumpy animated fowl hurl themselves at interloping pigs. Voiced by Jason Sudeikis and Maya Rudolph. PG. 97M. BROADWAY, MILL CREEK.

ME BEFORE YOU. Carpe diem love story about a caregiver and a suicidal quadriplegic man. Starring Emilia Clarke and Sam Claflin. PG. 110M. BROADWAY.

TEENAGE MUTANT NINJA TURTLES: OUT OF THE SHADOWS. Megan Fox and Will Arnett in the franchise that launched a thousand lunch boxes. PG-13. 112M. BROADWAY, FORTUNA, MILL CREEK.

NOTICE OF PROPERTY TAX DELINQUENCY AND IMPENDING DEFAULT

Revenue and Taxation Code Section 3351, 3352

I, John Bartholomew, Humboldt County Tax Collector, State of California, certify as follows:

That at close of business on June 30, 2016 by operation of law, any real property (unless previously tax-defaulted and not redeemed) that have any delinquent taxes, assessments, or other charges levied for the fiscal year 2015-2016, and/or any delinquent supplemental taxes levied prior to the fiscal year 2015-2016 shall be declared tax-defaulted.

That unless the tax defaulted property is completely redeemed through payment of all unpaid amounts, together with penalties and fees prescribed by law or an installment plan is initiated and maintained; the property may be sold subsequently at a tax sale to satisfy the tax lien.

That a detailed list of all properties remaining tax-defaulted at the close of business on June 30, 2016, and not redeemed prior to being submitted for publication, shall be published on or before September 8, 2019.

That information concerning redemption or the initiation of an installment plan of redemption of tax-defaulted property will be furnished, upon request, by John Bartholomew, Humboldt County Tax Collector at 825 5th Street, Room 125, Eureka, California 95501 (707)476-2450.

I certify or (declare), under penalty of perjury, that the foregoing is true and correct.

John Bartholomew
Humboldt County Tax Collector

Executed at Eureka, Humboldt County, California, on May 23rd, 2016. Published in the North Coast Journal on May 26th, June 2nd and June 9th, 2016.

NOTICE OF IMPENDING POWER TO SELL TAX-DEFAULTED PROPERTY

Revenue and Taxation Code Section 3361, 3362

Pursuant to Revenue and Taxation Code 3691 and 3692.4, the following conditions will, by operation of law, subject real property to the Tax Collector's power to sell.

1) All property for which property taxes and assessments have been in default for five or more years.
Note: The power to sell schedule for nonresidential commercial property is three or more years of tax-defaulted status, unless the county adopts, by ordinance or resolution, the five-year tax default schedule.

2) All property that has a nuisance abatement lien recorded against it and for which property taxes and assessments have been in default for three or more years.

3) Any property that has been identified and requested for purchase by a city, county, city and county, or nonprofit organization to serve the public benefit by providing housing or services directly related to low-income persons and for which property taxes and assessments have been in default for three or more years.

The parcels listed herein meet one or more of the criteria listed above and thus, will become subject to the Tax Collector's power to sell on July 1, 2016, at 12:01 a.m., by operation of law. The Tax Collector's power to sell will arise unless the property is either redeemed or made subject to an installment plan of redemption initiated as provided by law prior to close of business on the last business day in June. The right to an installment plan terminates on the last business day in June, and after that date the entire balance due must be paid in full to prevent sale of the property at public auction.

The right of redemption survives the property becoming subject to the power to sell, but it terminates at close of business on the last business day prior to the date of the sale by the Tax Collector.

All information concerning redemption or the initiation of an installment plan of redemption will be furnished, upon request, by John Bartholomew, Humboldt County Tax Collector, 825 5th Street, Room 125, Eureka, CA 95501, (707)476-2450.

The amount to redeem, including all penalties and fees, as of June 2016, is shown opposite the assessment/parcel number and next to the name of the assessee.

PARCEL NUMBERING SYSTEM EXPLANATION

The Assessor's Parcel/Assessment Number (APN/ASMT), when used to describe property in this list, refers to the Assessor's map book, the map page, the block on the map, if applicable, and the individual parcel on the map page or in the block. The Assessor's maps and further explanation of the parcel numbering system are available in the Assessor's office.

DELL'ARTE'S 26th ANNUAL

Mad River Festival

THE RIVER, OUR HOME

Lalilh, Jouwa Hinarr Daduk

The 2016 Mad River Festival is centered around Dell'Arte's current initiative "The River, Our Home," which explores through a variety of community partnerships, including with the Wiyot Tribe of Table Bluff, the ways in which we impact and are impacted by our relationship to watersheds. Dell'Arte's summer main stage show The Big Thirst is part of this initiative and takes a hard-hitting look at our treatment of one of our most precious resources—Water—here in Humboldt and in the world at large. Part investigation and part celebration, "The River, Our Home" project will also incorporate Wiyot language in new building signage.

Many thanks to Pierson Building Center who has sponsored the Mad River Festival since 2007! Special thanks also to Wildberries Marketplace and PG&E whose financial support helps us bring unique theatre, music, and family events to our community. Sponsorships make the festival possible for everyone in Humboldt!

JUNE 16-JULY 3

THE BIG THIRST

WORLD PREMIERE

The Dell'Arte Company

By Joan Schirle | Directed by Michael Fields

The Dell'Arte Company makes a splash with their latest work: The Big Thirst. The new play, by Joan Schirle, explores our water woes with humor and song through a "Roger Rabbit meets Inspector Clouseau"-like detective story. Directed by Michael Fields, the story digs into state water issues and unfurls a mystery involving politicians, animals, fish, the river, and an assortment of characters from agri-biz heavies to a sassy crow. And sends a presidential candidate down the drain.

The cast:

JANESSA JOHNSRUDE
DONALD FORREST
ALLIE MENZIMER
PRATIK MOTWANI
KAITLEN OSBURN
SARAH PETERS
SKIPPER

The band:

MARLA JOY
JEFF KELLEY
MIKE LABOLLE
TIM RANDLES

JUNE 10

MARY JANE – A MUSICAL POTUMENTARY

WORLD FILM PREMIERE

This black-tie and tie-dyed affair will roll out the green carpet and blaze-up the silver screen for one night only at the Eureka Theater! Part musical and part documentary, the film, created by Emmy Award Nominee John Howarth, examines the cannabis culture, impact, and it's future in Humboldt County. Join the Prima Donna of Ganja, Mary Jane, and her Sativa Superstars for the world's first showing of the sure-to-be Humboldt cult classic!
